NOTE FOR: Mr. Jack Blake

I have reviewed the 1969 Minutes of the Morning Meeting, 1 March through 30 April, and have found the following as extracted:

"DD/S reported that [redacted] has been chosen by the Postmaster General for the post of chief of their investigative division." (11 March 1969)

"DD/S called attention to last night's Washington Star item by Joseph Young that a CIA official may become Chief Postal Inspector, an obvious reference to [redacted] s candidacy." (27 March 1969)

CIA MAN IN LINE — It's reported that an official of the Central Intelligence Agency will become chief of the postal inspection service.

If so, it would be the first time in the history of the postal service that the chief postal inspector did not come up from the postal inspector ranks.

Postmaster Gen. Winton Blount reportedly feels the inspection service needs "new blood." However, postal employe union leaders and members of Congress are ready to raise the roof if the CIA man gets the job. They say postal employe morale and efficiency would drop drastically if an outsider got the job, particularly someone from the CIA.

Incidentally, the Post Office is keeping the name of the CIA official a secret.
